

Satnews Daily January 06, 2010

SAT Expo Europe 2010 — Don't Roam For Aerospace Information — Just Head To Rome!

SAT Expo Europe 2010, the third edition of the international event dedicated to the aerospace industry, its services and applications, and integrated telecommunications, will convene in Rome (New Exhibition Centre) from February 4 - 6.

The exhibiting area of SAT Expo Europe will host the industries, applications and services of the four aerospace macro areas (Earth observation, Navigation, Space Exploration and Transport, Integrated telecommunications). The “Mediterranean Space Conference” will also be held alongside the event, offering three days of meetings dedicated to the geopolitical strategies of aerospace in the Mediterranean, the Earth observation data new business opportunities, and its relevance for homeland security, territorial planning and prevention of environmental risks, the planning and development state of the Galileo system, the new management models of the aerospace and defense industry and the relations between the large aerospace industry and small and medium sized enterprises.

Special rates are available at the Sheraton Golf Parco De' Medici Hotel & Resort see photo.

To learn about SAT Expo Europe visit.

NASA will be in attendance at SAT Expo Europe 2010, and will be an exhibitor as well with its own booth on Space Communications and Navigation.

“We are honored to have NASA attending this international exhibition” says Paolo Dalla Chiara, President of SAT Expo Europe. “NASA is the agency of the United States government, responsible for the nation’s public space program and civilian aerospace research. Its investment fund is the biggest among the world’s space agencies. A number of Italian companies have been involved in its development programs. By sharing their skills and know-how they have made their contribution to missions that have marked the history of space, which is now heading towards the exploration of Mars,” adds Mr. Dalla Chiara. “Having NASA at SAT Expo Europe represents a great opportunity for Italian and foreign operators and it confirms the importance gained on the world scene by this show at its third year of life.”